

Sean McLennon

Sean McLennon currently teaches junior high music in Sydney, Nova Scotia. He has taught all levels from Kindergarten to High School in Nova Scotia and in Newfoundland and Labrador over his 20-year career. Sean received his undergraduate training at Memorial University of Newfoundland and Labrador and a Master of Music from the University of Western Ontario. He has served as president of the Newfoundland and Labrador Music Educators Association and is currently the president of the Nova Scotia Music Educators' Association. His main interest lies in instrumental music, but he also likes to incorporate recording arts into his teaching. He is the co-owner/operator of a recording studio and live sound company. Sean is the co-conductor of Second Wind Community Band and plays tuba with several groups in Nova Scotia including the Cape Breton Orchestra and Nova Brass Quintet. Sean has had several articles published in CMEA publications including a first place award in the Franklin Churchley Graduate Student Essay Competition.